21 amendment.

The amendment to the Judiciary Article,

Congressman, was not made just to take care of some senator. The Article came about as the result of deliberations of the Bond Commission which was certainly one of the finest groups that we have ever had here in the State studying this subject, and at that time, it was decided to make the Court of Appeals jurisdiction appellate only and the Commission recommended that the Constitution also be amended so that judges could be appointed from the Legislature to pass the implementing constitutional amendment.

Subsequently, the Constitution was further and amended to provide that the circuit judges/still subsequently and the amendment which is before the people today on the Court of Special Appeals has a similar provision saying the members of the General Assembly can fill that particular vacancy, all of which was supported by the Bar Association and has been supported by the Bar Association since as early as 1942.
